LIFTING THE LID ON HOUSES IN OUR STREETS

What's happening inside them?

There are many aspects of dysfunction in suburban families in our society, and it is not well known that research has led (among other things) to development of specialist programs for General Practitioners to assist them to recognise the symptoms and deal with the issues more holistically.

As Professor of General Practice in the Medical Faculty at the University of Melbourne, Kelsey Hegarty has been at the forefront of this work in educating medical practitioners. She will enlighten us as to the scope and effectiveness of this approach.
