Resetting Cultures Within the Church

It is a common catchcry that there is a need for drastic culture change within the Church, following the scandal of sexual abuse revealed by the Royal Commission. What might this mean in practice, and how might it be achieved?

How do we achieve greater transparency in Church governance? What is the scope for change in Canon Law? Can clericalism be broken down? What approach is needed regarding compensation for survivors of clerical abuse?

Father Frank Brennan SJ, AO will address these and related questions. He needs little introduction, being the Catholic priest of the highest public profile in Australia, and among other things being appointed to the panel of public inquiry into religious freedom here.
