Stage 2 of the Plenary Council consultations at St Carthage's

Stage 2 of the Plenary Council consultation process is called communal discernment. Some thirteen parishioners have responded to the call for expressions of interest to take part in discussing and making recommendations for local and national action. The focus is on the six themes that emerged from Stage 1 of the consultation process (see the Plenary Council website for more details).

The first meeting for the St Carthages group will be held at the Parish Centre on Monday 18 November, 7.30 - 9 pm. Richard and Jan Curtain are convening the meeting. If you want to take part, please contact them at richard@curtain-consulting.net.au for further details about the process.

Archbishop James Goold (1812-1886) was Melbourne's first Archbishop, and is widely praised for his vision and building in transforming the city's Catholic world from humble beginnings into the metropolis and legacy of today. Inspired by neo-Gothic architecture, baroque art and cultural ideals, Archbishop Goold dreamed big for the future and beauty of his diocese, including his greatest legacy: the grandeur and foresight of Melbourne's St Patrick's Cathedral which he commissioned, but died before its ultimate completion in 1897.

Organist Christopher Trikilis is Director of Music and Organist of Camberwell's iconic Our Lady of Victories Basilica, and will present a program of organ music inspired by the art and beauty of the Baroque era which encouraged and motivated Archbishop Goold.

In conjunction with the exhibition at Old Treasury Building 'The Invention of Melbourne: A Baroque Archbishop and a Gothic Architect'...
