Celebrating St Carthage (Mochuda): a patron for refugees?

This celebration of music, poetry and history celebrates the feast-day of our patron saint (Carthage/Carthach), also called Mochuda (d. 14 May 637). Less well-known than St Patrick or St Brigid, the story of Carthage and his concern for outsiders deserves to be told. A native of Kerry, he established a community at Rahan in central Ireland where he attracted lepers from every region. Hostility from other communities, however, led to Carthage and his followers being forced to take refuge in Lismore, in south-east Ireland. This event, organized by Constant Mews and Chris Watson, celebrates the memory of this remarkable saint not just in Ireland, but here in Australia. It also involves Irish harp music (by Cath Connolly) and song (Maryna Mews). Refreshments will be offered immediately following the event. Cath Connolly will stay on to play the harp at 5.00pm mass. No admission fee, but there will be a collection to support the Diocese of Lismore Flood Appeal, NSW, where the community around St Carthage's cathedral has been much affected by flooding.
